Asset management strategy

Risky assets ended a profitable month in February, marked by an avalanche of all-time records for global stock markets. On Wall Street, the Dow Jones, the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq 100 reached new highs, while in Europe, the CAC 40 and Dax also peaked, matched by Japan. The Nikkei broke a nearly 35-year record. Several factors contributed to this record-breaking spree. US chipmaker Nvidia's stellar results added to the market's enthusiasm for artificial intelligence (AI), giving an indirect boost to all stocks even remotely related to this theme. More generally, the full-year earnings season ending on both sides of the Atlantic is showing positive results, with companies' margins generally holding up well.

On the macroeconomic front, investors digested the cautious messages from the major central banks, which nevertheless point to an initial interest-rate cut by the European Central Bank (ECB) and the Federal Reserve (Fed) in June, a little later than initially expected.

European indices continued to rise, supported by their flagship growth stocks, notably enabling the CAC 40 and Dax indices to reach new all-time highs. The markets were reassured by inflation figures for February, which confirmed that the deceleration in inflation was well underway in the eurozone. For the Stoxx 600 index, earnings per share (EPS) forecasts for 2024 were reduced by 50 basis points to 4.5%, while growth forecasts for 2025 were increased by 30 basis points to 9.8%. Against this backdrop, the ACT4 Positive Economy fund gained 2.%, in line with the index (+2.47%). In February, sector performances reflected market reactions to corporate earnings releases and macroeconomic conditions. The utilities (-6.3%), telecoms (-1.1%), staples (-3.6%) and real-estate (-8.4%) sectors posted disappointing performances, ending the month down. In contrast, the consumer discretionary (+8.7%), industry (+6%) and construction sectors demonstrated effective cost management and good free cash-flow generation (FCF), ranking among the best performers. The technology sector performed particularly well, with a rise of 5.9% over the month, driven by the rapid growth of artificial intelligence, with 75% of companies in the sector exceeding expectations. The fund rose as well as the index, due in particular to its overweighting in technology and industrials, despite its underweighting in consumer discretionary.

In the industrial sector, Tomra systems (31.4%) was the strongest contributor this month, given very low expectations before the publication of the fourth quarter report and solid results, with improvements in the areas of recycling and revenue collection (+26% and +18% respectively in Q4). Schneider electric also posted a good performance (+14.7%) following the announcement of reassuring results and an ambitious organic growth target of 7-10% CAGR over four years. Smidcaps suffered from macroeconomic news on interest rates, including Waga Energy (-29%), whose activity is expanding to the US and could be impacted by the outcome of the US elections, as well as NX Filtration (-18.9%) following the profit warning in January concerning a delay in volume growth and whose financing needs from 2025 are weighing on the stock. Acciona Energia (-20.8%), which, after the fall in electricity prices, continues to face high project financing.

Transactions during the month included creating a line in Smurfit Kappa, adding to DSM and reducing in Novo Nordisk.
